In 2003, Spain had a caries free population of 52.3% (68.2% in the child population), a rate of 72.9% for fluoridation of the water supply (54.3% for child population), and still had a prevalence of severe periodontal disease of 12.6% in the 15-65 year-old population. One of the priorities of Public Health is to reduce the morbidity and prevalence of oral diseases. A first step in achieving this goal is the promotion of an adequate oral health-disease prevention program by primary care. Due to the oral pathology acquired, preventive programs focused on the early detection and treatment of precursors and risk factors in the primary care environment. It is a step forward to include oral health in the Family Practice programme, with preventive measures of increased importance and population-based performance control (bundled care approach). In this paper, we review current literature related to oral health promotion and prevention in the Spanish context.Browsed byCategory: Personal Colognes Neroli and orange blossom are two of the most lovable scents in the world. Combine the two in a basic perfume, and you'll have a scent that makes others swoon. This is a soft, fruity scent with a touch of sweetness to it. If you're looking for a more... Roses are a symbol of love, beauty and a great scent. Rose scents are like a room of opulence and beauty to anyone who walks in. When wearing rose scents, nothing else matters. It's the most flamb

In a packet-based network, such as an Ethernet network, the computing devices communicate data by dividing the data into small blocks called packets, which are individually routed across the network from a source device to a destination device. A variety of intermediate devices operate to route the packets between the computing devices. For example, a computer network may include routers, switches, gateways, firewalls, and a variety of other devices to facilitate the communication of the packets. Virtual private networks (VPNs) may provide secure communication for users of the VPN. In VPNs, access to various resources of a network is controlled based on a secure, encrypted communication channel. Various data security and identity authentication services may also be provided by the VPN. In an example, a VPN may allow a corporate user to access a corporate intranet or file server without exposing the user to an open internet. The VPN provides this secure access by encrypting the communications between the user's computing device and the intranet or file server. Thus, communications between the computing device and the intranet are secure, as they are encrypted using cryptographic algorithms. In an example, a VPN uses security protocols to bind a tunnel to a single packet flow. The tunnel is established by 3e33713323
