Eco-friendly solvents for the synthesis of aryl-2,2'-substituted acridines. A new versatile method for the facile synthesis of a series of 2,2'-disubstituted acridines from arylamines and acridine-based carbenes is described. The protocol involves the reduction of 2-(N,N-dimethylamino)acridine using a combination of reducing agents to afford several aryl-2,2'-substituted acridines in excellent yields. The reaction has a broad substrate scope and the products are highly regioselective. In addition, a variety of non-toxic solvents (like aqueous methanol and acetonitrile) are used as an alternative to toxic solvents like xylene or dimethylacetamide to facilitate the ease of the synthetic protocol. Wegener's granulomatosis is a life-threatening vasculitis in which 95% of patients are positive

No studies are available to evaluate CXR in Mexican patients with the disease. To evaluate the contribution of the CXR findings to the diagnosis of Wegener's granulomatosis.
